On the 13th February 2002 Paul Kelly was involved in an accident at work near Chorley. The Chorley and Bamber Bridge fire crews fought heroically for 45 minutes to free Paul. During this time paramedics Bob Keane and Zoe Steel kept Paul alive. Paul was loaded into the waiting air ambulance having lost both hands and his leg below his knee.

Paul Kelly would not have survived the journey time in a road ambulance.

He was flown the 7 miles to Royal Preston Hospital in 2 minutes. Within the essential to recovery “Golden Hour”.

Paul after being stabilised was flown on to Wythenshawe Hospital. An introduction to the finest micro surgeons in the world followed. 10 surgeons worked for 22 hours on Pauls damaged limbs saving both hands and an outstanding repair to his upper left leg keeping the knee joint.

12 months later Paul was running, driving, and at work with a big smile on his face.
